

Can You?

Can you still love me after everything I've done

Can you still hold me in your arms and tell me I'm the only one

Can you still look at me when I look up to you

If you can, you're more of a woman than I am a man

Can you still walk with me and hold your head up high

Can you still lie with me at night without a teardrop in your eye

Can you forgive me and forget I ever strayed

If you can, you're more of a woman than I am a man

I'm a fool who makes a game of bending all the rules

Half a man would act his age and never be so cruel

Trouble is, it's hard to quit jumping out of bounds

When I know you're gonna catch me just before I hit the ground

Can you still love me after everything I've done

Can you still hold me in your arms and tell me I'm the only one

Can you still look at me when I look up to you

If you can, you're more of a woman than I am a man
